THE LEADERSHIP CHALLENGE®

James Kouzes and Barry Posner

- Based on over three decades of research, found common patterns of how ordinary leaders get extraordinary things done in organizations.
- Great leaders are not born, they learn.
 - Leadership is an observable, learnable set of practices represented in The Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership®
 - It's all about relationships – leadership is everyone's business.
- The Leadership Practices Inventory® [LPI® 360°] presents one of the most widely-used, valid and reliable instruments in the world today that both managers and non-managers [individual contributors] across both private and public organizations can take to assess their skills and use this feedback to improve leadership abilities. You will receive personal and confidential feedback at the workshop.
- Worldwide research and over eight hundred doctoral studies have documented findings that LPI® scores are positively related to job satisfaction and employee commitment levels. Job satisfaction, productivity, and organizational commitment are significantly correlated with The Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership®. Anyone can learn how to measurably improve effectiveness as a leader.
- Of the numerous 360° instruments on the market today, we have found that the LPI® 360° offers a reasonably-priced, easy-to-administer and understandable way to build effective leadership skills. It can be built into action plans, skill-building workshops – with the results measured through follow-up successive administrations of the instrument.
- Action planning and successful completion of planned goals are an integral part of the workshop design to achieve measurable results.
- Much of the learning takes place through “Experiences with Impact.” Participants learn in ways that stick and can be realistically applied back in the workplace.
